

Japan's

Digital Gender Gap

In a world where nearly half of all people do not have access to the internet, Japan has made great progress in connecting its citizens with digital information and opportunities.

THE GAP...

13.2%

Despite being so well connected as a nation, among Japanese people, 13.2% more men than women have access to the internet, resulting in a significant

DIGITAL GENDER GAP.

IN JAPAN

98.5%

of households have access to the internet, making it the 3rd most connected country in the world, surpassed only by Kuwait (100%) and South Korea (99.5%), according to data by the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU).
